

The future of good learning has arrived

By Sphindile Mabatha

@Miss_Blackbone

Soweto learners now have the option of attending Future Nations Schools as well now that the Fleurhof

Mampho Langa the head of school for Future Nation School said, "The strategic intent of Future Nation Schools is to produce future African leaders who are passionate, excel in what they do, are ready for the 21st century and are confident in themselves.

To prepare your child for the 4th Industrial Revolution, Future Nation Schools will be your number one option. As it will provide tools that will enable your child to be an innovator and a problem-solver for this world.

Opened last year, the paper, these schools were first launched in 2016 and is 100% owned subsidiary of the Sifiso Learning Group, an education group which seeks to

The provided education is characterized by:

- Student-centered learning,
- High academic standards,
- Problem-solving skills,
- A focus on applied research and development (including
- Project-based teaching and learning)

be the leading learning group in Africa, with global reach.

The aim of the school is to spearhead the African education revolution by providing a model that is both futuristic, technology enabled and epitomises excellence in Africa.

They have their Future Nation brands which provide education from preschools to post graduate studies.

They aimed at offering affordable private schools across South Africa, and to the rest of Africa. With a 60% pass rate Sowetans can now opt for this innovative private school that allows learners to learn the theory and the ability to apply it to the real world. Langa said schools are different from the rest because their curriculum is project-based learning, which means that some of their subject include Robotics which is a subject most schools do not offer.

Look forward to a new way of thinking and an environment for your child compared to the regular set-up of a classroom.

Unfortunately, due to the fact that the school is still a new institution, it doesn't offer funding for learners who cannot pay for themselves, they are situated only 2KM from Soweto and promises a learning experience out of the ordinary classroom.

The school accepts 150 students per grade and guess what? Applications are still open, so you still have time to send your son, or daughter there.

No criteria are needed for entry into the school, "We believe child has to ability to reach great heights, said Langa."

"The strategic intent of Future Nation Schools is to produce future African leaders who are passionate, excel in what they do, are ready for the 21st century and are confident in themselves," said Langa to motivate parents to sign their children up.